The Guardian view on Hong Kong: a broken promise | Editorial

The end of one country, two systems is now clearly in sight. Though Beijing promised to respect Hong Kong's freedoms and autonomy for a full half-century, it has chipped and then hacked away at them since the handover in 1997.

The Guardian view on climate and Covid: time to make different choices | Editorial

The dust storms that devastated the US prairie during the Great Depression were the worst ecological disaster in American history. They were also, partly, manmade. Decades of farming in the Great Plains had rid the topsoil of its native grass, leaving nothing to prevent fields crumbling to dust when drought struck in 1931.

Amid pandemic, politics needs to resume in its core sense - politicians, parties need to connect with people

The past two months have thrown up an incongruous image of the politician and the political party. They are the wielders of power, they talk of the "people", but betray an instinctive choice of "law and order" and a techno-bureaucratic idea of governance. Most parties have been on a holiday.

Who is being backed by Pakistan in Afghanistan in these days of chaos?

The recent violence in Afghanistan has highlighted its multi-pronged conflict. The IS or Islamic State may hate Shias just as the Taliban does but they hate each other too. Pakistan may hate the Pakistani Taliban that the Afghan Taliban doesn't hate but it can hardly get the "friendly" Haqqani Group to be an arbiter in the Afghanistan negotiations.

Boosting demand with cheap credit to consumers is not a good idea

The Union government is often criticised for its apparent neglect of the demand side and its excessive focus on the supply side and structural reforms - the COVID-19 package was no exception. Pointing towards tepid credit growth, weak inflation, and flat wage growth to make their case, demand-side proponents suggest measures such as cash transfers, income tax cuts, and cheap credit to consumers.
